2022 Creative Child
BOOK OF THE YEAR AWARD:
Picture Books for Kids

History is full of fascinating stories of colorful characters, but some of the most interesting parts of history are really odd. You have probably seen scenes of government officials with their powdered white wigs, but in the 1700s, England and high-society American colonies, women created towering hairstyles. Decorations such as ships and flowers were sometimes added to their hairdos, especially if attending a big party. Taking hours to create, women used beef tallow and sugar-water to keep their hairdos in place. This fictional account explains a very real fashion trend and the problems it created for women trying to look stylish! Author is an NCSS and NY State Outstanding Social Studies Teacher of the Year. Educator's guide available online.

"The lengths that high-society women in the 1700s would go to for their hairstyles... Readers will goggle at the very notion."

During the Middle Ages, your position in life was based on birth. This position would follow you throughout your life. To make it easy for others to know your social class, rules about what you could wear or not wear, were created. Such rules, called sumptuary laws, determined colors of clothing, types of fabric and trims, length of garments, types of sleeves, and types of furs. The laws also regulated shoe lengths and height, hat height, types of buttons, and even the number of buttons you could wear. People were to dress according to the class in which they were born. In this way, just looking at someone, you could tell if they were important or not. Educator's guide available online.

D DIVERSITY TITLE

BOOK 1: The Deadening

Derrick Hollis is a 7th grader and aspiring cartoonist who is too shy to show his work to anyone but his best friend. Derrick is devastated when his dog Max dies. But Max returns from the other side and begins to give Max advice on standing up to bullies and how to deal with affairs of the heart.

BOOK 2: The Rocking Dead

Derrick’s “Dead Max Comix” are such a hit in the school paper that he and Max start an advice column. Derrick and his friend Doug should have asked for advice before starting a band without inviting Kim and Keisha to join.

BOOK 3: Bully For You

Derrick finally feels like he’s getting the hang of Middle School. He’s in a band with his best friends and his dogs Bennie and Max are getting along. Even his Dead Max comics and advice columns are a hit, until Derrick’s cartoons protesting racism backfire. The Muslim kids turn against him and the paper is in danger of being shut down. Is Derrick a racist bully or trying to help some friends fight hatred?

BOOK 4: Furball of the Apocalypse!

Derrick’s goldfish, Finn and Gillian, have gone missing! Things take a turn for the weird when Derrick realizes his two science teachers are also nowhere to be found. What do plankton, plastic, and the fate of oceans have to do with missing persons and fishy pets?

“Dead Max is drop-dead funny.”

Even though her family calls her Emma Bemma, Emma knows she is really a dilEmma because she is just medium. That's because she's the middle kid between her two brothers, who everyone calls Big and Little. Big thinks he's the coolest kid on the planet now that he's 10. That means he doesn't want to play anything with Emma anymore. And everyone thinks Little is just adorable even when he picks his nose! Ugh! What's a middle child to do? Emma has to ride in the middle seat as her family heads out on a weeklong beach vacation with friends, where being just medium will only get worse! Then Emma has an idea. What if she could get out of being in the middle by taking on a new role? What if she acted BIG? Or even bigger than that? Will things go as planned? Or will she have another huge dilEmma? Discussion Guide available online.

A boy named Fred turns into "Frankenstein's monster" after an author visit gone all wrong. While Fred is out sick, the author signs Fred's book "To Frank". When Fred's desk-mate Luisa suggests Fred must really be "Frank" in school, this sparks an idea for Fred's creative writing assignment. Fred's What-If poem is coming together wonderfully, until—a mist fills the room and the writing assignment comes to life. Suddenly Fred—now Frankinschool—and Luisa—now Princessa Luisa—need to save the school from the mysterious potion—and the even more mysterious and devious ghost living in the school attic. Discussion Guide available online.
